Creator: Washington University in St. Louis.
Title: Supplemental finding aid for the Washington University in St. Louis Magazine Collection.
Quantity: ca. 86 items.
Language: English.

Historical Note:
The University has produced a publication directed towards alumni since the early 1900s. The publication has changed name over time. It is currently called Washington University in St. Louis Magazine.

Scope and Content Note:
This collection contains the publication Washington University in St. Louis Magazine and its predecessors and similar publications, 1903 – present.

For most issues, 1908 – 2004, a listing of the issues’ table of contents is available. Indexes to various issues have been compiled indicating the specific articles and page numbers per issue. In most cases this is taken from the publication’s own front matter, but when not present, this was compiled by archives staff directly from headings/titles.

The following titles are not currently indexed “Alumni Association Bulletin,” No. 1-8, 1907-1921

Whole issues for 2000 – 2008 are available in electronic format at http://magazine.wustl.edu

Additional Guides:
For descriptions of all titles within the collection and further historical details, please consult the main finding aid for the “Washington University in St. Louis Magazine Collection,” available on-line and at University Archives.

It’s Another Saturday Night: And what is there to do at Washington University? Student Lori Tenser investigated what the hard-working academics on campus do for fun

Stanley Elkin, An Anecdote: Author and philosophy professor William Gass profiles one of his best friends, Stanley Elkin, and uncovers the wit and wisdom of the prize-winning novelist.

Turning Middle Aged: Faculty member Stanley Elkin describes the withdrawal of expectations that middle age brings on.
U.S. Technology in Jeopardy: Unless the United States bring about cooperation among education, industry, and government in research and development, our technological edge may go the way of the sun.

Experimenting in Space: Washington University’s experiments on the space shuttle missions are more than cosmic dust. One experiment will help disbetics while the other may give a clue to the origin of the solar system.

Diplomacy and Desegregation: Bruce La Pierre, law professor, was asked by the courts to mediate and help develop a plan to desegregate St. Louis schools that met with the approval of all factions.

Middle East Illusions: Victor Le Vine, political science professor, offers his analysis of the Middle East mirage. Through Western eyes, that area of the world always has a cloudy future.

Fighting Heart Attacks: A chemical called t-PA has been shown to dissolve those life-threatening blood clots blocking a coronary artery.

Inner City Visions: Alumna Evelyn Davis writes about her experiences as a social worker in inner city St. Louis.

Halley’s Comet: That fire in the sky is returning and a Washington University alumnus and a faculty member are in the thick of things exploring what these balls of ice mean to the origin of the universe.

The Mark Twain Myth: Professor emeritus Guy Cardwell discusses the myth behind Mark Twain, the righteous symbol of America, and pops a few bubbles along the way.

Six Steps for Puncturing a Ballooning Deficit

Professor Murray Weidenbaum gives his viewpoint on the agony and ecstasy of trying to cut the federal budget.

Openers: A student makes shorts, a Chinese dignitary visits. Cosell lauds WU, the soccer team places second, and a host of other short stories.

Why I Teach: Wayne Fields, associate professor of English, begins this section by telling why he doesn’t wrestle alligators. Then, other instructors from all parts of campus tell why they teach.

The Art of Teaching: How do some of the best WU instructors keep the art of teaching? The real debate, some of them say, is about standards and whether you want to have a first rate university or a pretty good college.

Close Encounters of a Learning Kind: The students get the chance to be honest about some of their instructors.

One Week in a Teacher’s Life: In this photographic essay, herb Weitman, associate editor, captures on film the sometimes hectic, sometimes exhilarating teaching life of James F. Jones, Jr., professor of Romance Languages and Literatures.

Research: The Razor’s Edge: At a major university like Washington, research becomes a key ingredient to good teaching.

Magic Moments: Alumni from every school on campus reflect on their experiences with Washington University’s finest.
On Having a Good Time: Robert Wiltenburg, assistant professor of English, gives a hearty welcome to incoming Washington University freshman. Then he offers some teacherly advice.

What Price The Stars?: The space-shuttle program costs more than it seems, not only on the toll of human lives but in the restrictions it places on scientific research in space.

Changing the Built Landscape

High Wire Act: The restoration of St. Louis’ historic Union Station is an urban development feat of remarkable skill and courage, and University alumni had their hands all over it.

Cornerstone of the Future: John E. Simon Hall, the new home of the School of Business, is both a return to the vision that first created the Hilltop campus and an opportunity to move vigorously forward.

An Opera House for the People: WU graduate Carlos Ott won out over almost 750 contestants in an international competition to redesign the Pris opera for France’s Bicentennial. Not so long ago, he was a struggling architect. Now he’s known in Paris as “Le Cowboy Gaucho.”

The Great Escape: Once a person decides to quit drinking, how do you help him live with that decision? A new program at Jewish Hospital in St. Louis looks beyond chemical dependency to treat the rest of a sufferer’s life.

Frontrunners: The latest in research, achievements and other adventures, from around the campus and beyond.

The Lure of the Dig: Armed with a careful reading of The Odyssey, professor of art history and archaeology Sarantis Symeonoglou has returned each summer for the past three years to the small island of Ithaca looking for the home of Odysseus, the wandering hero of Greek legend.

Sonny’s Last Stand: Sonny Stitt was a jazzman with a golden horn – pursued all his life by the ghost of Charlie “Yardbird” Parker.
20 Women of the New Right: The political body of conservative women is made up of two separate parts, says sociologist Rebecca Klatch, each with its own set of values.

25 Unraveling What is Unseen: World-class chemist, numismatist, music lover and teacher, Peter Gaspar this year received the Kipping Award, an international accolade, for work with molecules that exist for only fractions of a second.

32 Living in the Garden of Eden: Campus visitor Bill Moyers talks about the importance of remembering what has gone before.
20 The Rise of Volunteerism: Altruistic activity is back in fashion on college campuses around the country

22 Confessions of an Iconoclast: Being a woman has both helped and hurt her career, but psychologist Jane Loevinger has always been her own person.

26 Testing the Limits of Transplants: Surgeon Wayne Flye, by exploring the frontiers of laboratory research, hopes to avoid the necessity of transplant operations.

32 On Making Art in the Provinces: There are advantages, says Professor of Art James McGarrell, to being an artist outside New York City.

Fronrunners: Short takes on the history of the University

The Founding of Washington University: To celebrate the 150th anniversary of the University’s founding, Washington University is publishing a new history book, Beginning a Great Work: Washington University in St. Louis, 1853-2003. Author Candace O’Connor’s opening excerpt details the day 10 of the original 17 directors met to take advantage of the Charter they had held for nearly a year.

imagine a University: professor Wayne Fields, an expert in the rhetoric of U.S. presidents, turns his expertise to the rhetoric of Washington University chancellors. He examines four speeches that set forth a vision for transforming the University from a local “streetcar” college to today’s nationally and internationally respected entity.
20 Bringing Distinction and Honor to the University: Over the years, 22 Nobel laureates have been associated with Washington University. Many served as distinguished faculty members while doing their award-winning work, some were graduate students, and one was the grandson of a University co-founder.

24 Washington University Students: active, Energetic, and Involved: To supplement their classroom experiences, Washington University students have always been involved with co-curricular activities. Take a glimpse at how these activities have changed, or stayed the same, over the years.

30 Rite of Assembly: Growing out of the University’s centennial celebration, the Assembly Series continues to bring intellectually enlightening, challenging, and stimulating speakers to campus for the benefit of students, faculty, staff, alumni, and the public.

34 My Washington: Whether working in the armed services, running a business, or assisting community organizations, Jack Taylor, BU ’44, has led each endeavor by aspiring to the highest values, applying discipline, and building teamwork.

36 Alumni Activities: Founders Week kicks off the Sesquicentennial Celebration with a 150th Birthday Party on Sunday, September 14, and Founders Day Dinner on Saturday, September 20.

48 Washington Spirit: Robert Virgil: A series spotlighting key faculty and staff who help make this great University run.
a school in Luxembourg City, and helping establish a Commission on the Statue of Women

32 My Washington: Norman Foster has parlayed a lifetime of finding creative, environmentally sound solutions for hazardous waste into support for the University and its students, among other important endeavors

34 Alumni Activities: Marie Prange Oetting receives the 2003 Eliot Society “Search” Award; Gordon Philpott, M.D. ’61, is serving as chair of the Alumni Board of Governors; and check out Reunion 2003!

2 Frontrunners: Short takes on WU’s community of great minds and great ideas
9 partnering for the Betterment of the Community: Throughout its 150-year history, Washington University has collaborated with many local cultural and scientific institutions; over time, the relationships have changed and grown, yet the mission has stayed the same—to form stronger partnerships for community enrichment.
14 Clarifying the Convergence of Biotechnology and the Law: An expert in bioethics, Professor Rebecca Dresser explains the complexities of biomedical research and policy to both medical and law students
18 ‘Over There”: World War I and Washington University: An excerpt from the soon-to-be-published history book, Beginning a Great Work: Washington University in St. Louis, 1853-2003, highlights heroics performed during the war by those affiliated with the University
22 Exposing Evolutionary Answers: professor Jonathan Losos and members of his research team study lizards to understand the origins of diversification and how organisms survive
26 Expressions of Faith: Best-selling author Anita Diamant, A.B. ’73, shares her faith, the importance of friendships, and a sense of community, in both fact and fiction, with her readers
29 Engineering ‘Real Time’ Reactions: At Aspen Technology, Peter Hanratty, M.S.Ch.E. ’88, D.Sc. ’91, uses computer modeling to help chemical plants and refineries around the globe run more efficiently
32 My Washington: Frank and Florence Bush have served generously in numerous ways for the advancement of the University’s mission, and their dedication and enthusiasm have benefited generations of students.
34 Alumni Activities: Washington University’s Founders Week, which opened with the sesquicentennial Birthday Party on September 14 and culminated with the 2003 Founders Day dinner on September 20, was a week filled with remarkable events. Take a glimpse!

8 Lasting Lessons: Three alumni describe their favorite teachers
10 Revolutionizing Medical Research and Patient Care: Expanding on the successes of the medical school’s Genome Sequencing center, Washington University is poised to transform health care. The University is creating and merging three new interdisciplinary research units into one expansive initiative—BioMed 21.
14 After the A, B, C’s: Psychology Professor Rebecca Treiman is among the world’s leading experts in literacy and spelling development; her discoveries about how children learn language skills are important to scientists and schoolteachers alike
18 The Architectural Wonders of the Aegean World: Four decades of teaching and research culminate in Constantine E. Michaelides’ authoritative-and lavishly illustrated—“scholarly guidebook” to the historic Greek islands, The Aegean Crucible.
22 A Successful “Experiment”: The Conquering Spirit of Alice Belcher: Mary Alice Belcher was the first female student to attend the Collegiate Department at the University in 1870
25 Picturing the Good, the Bad, and the Ugly: As an “embedded photographer” during operation Iraqi Freedom, alumnus Ben Lowy, B.F.A. ’01, chronicled the assault on the 101st Airborne.
28 Under Wraps: Named one of the world’s top young innovators by Technology Review, alumna Lorrie Cranor, B.S. ’92, M.S. ’93, M.S. ’96, D.Sc. ’96, works to protect your private information on the Web. She also lends her creativity to quilt-making
30 Behind the Facades: Alumni of the Thurtene Honorary recall their experiences with the magical Thurtene Carnival
34 My Washington: Over the years, Edith Wolff has tended and grawn the seeds of philanthropy that she and her late husband, Alan Wolff, originally planted after their initial business successes
36 Alumni Activities: Internships serve as stepping stones to job placements, and “Month of Caring” volunteers serve nationwide.

Hard Data
For Many, the porcupine is a joke animal, but Naturalist Uldis Roze finds it "a teacher, a storyteller of the woods, a complexifier and adorner of the world".

Lillian Parks now leads the school system in which she grew up.
